Sustainable appearance Inspired by nature

Inspired by the enchanting colours of the Northern Lights, The Aurora Collection is the latest range of premium powder coatings from Jotun that builds on the brand's promise for innovative eco-friendly products. With 11 beautiful colours to choose from, The Aurora Collection is the right choice for sustainable design.

Architects today are looking to make a statement with their projects – they not only choose sophisticated design options but also use a smart approach for the selection of materials to make projects more economically and ecologically viable.

Design made easy

The Aurora Collection provides a rich, organic and luxurious finesse to modern-day structures. By hiding die lines and substrate imperfections, it ensures high quality and consistent finishing. Moreover, thanks to the excellent chemical resistance of powder compared to alternative technologies, the coated structures are easier to clean and maintain, cutting down on the need for repair and rework, and extending their life-cycle.

Since it is available for use on both aluminium and steel substrates, it allows for flexibility in choosing materials for the project.

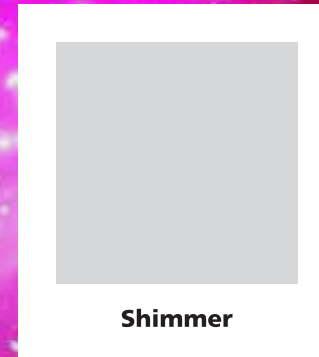

With The Aurora Collection, architects can now achieve stylish and fashionable appearance combined with the high performance and durability required for their projects. The Aurora Collection meets Qualicoat Class 1 and 2 performance requirements and also complies with AAMA 2603 and 2604.

With the increasing emphasis on sustainable architecture, powder coating is an environmentally friendly solution due to its minimal use of chemicals, water and electricity in the application process. Additionally, in comparison to alternative technologies, the powder coating process is more efficient and less labour intensive allowing for higher productivity.
